The Round Table needs YOU!

Posted by Guillaume le Courageux - 2008/10/20 20:44

Once more, the Round Table is in need of support of you, the Knights and Ladies gathered here. Over the last three years, donations have kept this site running, constantly upgraded to meet the growing load, and - most importantly - ad-free.

Now another year begins, and the current donations (for which we gladly thank all the supporters!) are not sufficient to cover all the costs.

The server is currently handling the load of ~ 12000 unique visitors / 360000 pages / 10GB per month (more or less), at a cost of about 190 Euro a year.

Any contributions are greatly appreciated! You can donate using the "Donate" button to the left ("Support Us" ) via PayPal using most Debit / Credit cards or bank accounts. For other means of donating, just contact me directly (e.g. European bank transfer).

Edit: 190â, a year, not a month fortunately (thnx for pointing it out, Uther)

Perhaps sir Guillaume le Courageux could keep us informed how the fundraising is progressing?
Hmm yes, why not. For transparency, I'm protocolling all donations in the internal board for the Staff anyways...
Currently, more than 90% of the annual cost of the server is covered, thanks to you all! Now I hope that the flow does not just stop - I'd rather constantly have some small donations than having to come back to ask every year :blush:

Guillaume supposedly needs another new bike.

Rest assured, my bike is fine and I need only one :P

Anyways, all donations are 100% for this community (except the "tax" that PayPal deducts). If there should be more than needed, it will be kept for the next server upgrade, or used for a prize for a future contest.

Sorry, I often forget that part :P

Rest assured that every cent is well-received, and I bet any member here is thankful for it, as it ensures the smooth running of this site. And even if I might not acknowledge every donation right here immediately - all donations are recorded internally, also for the other Staff members to check. And anyone contributing should appear shortly afterwards on the List of Supporters.

An update on the current balance: There are still 3/4 missing for the next payment period in November.

If you donate money with Paypal you can use whatever your national currency is and it will do the converting for you so it ends up in the account holder's currency. Easy as pie.

I would happily contribute if I where I true knight with lots of money like people.

Unfortunately I still live at my parents castle and I hardly get any money and what I do get i need to use on upholding Breonna's honour by employeeding more troops as my friends at our school club (which is the best in the country according to the school league) say they will spit on us!!!

But I wish you all the best and when I collect the tax's I will give some of it to you (which I hope will be soon!) I swear by my life I will give at least the sum of Â£50.

Just a suggestion - but perhaps there should be a medal to honour the supporters? I think some additional knights could offer some coin from their treasuries to be able to show that honour below their name.

Is this idea to banal?

I also had this idea one or two years ago, and when we last discussed it the general opinion was against it because it looked like "buying medals". Are there new opinions?

Pretty sure i forked over some groats for the cause.B)
May need to update the list for Yildirim and i.:P

As for a medal for donations,although it does seem a bit mercenary,it may be just the thing to increase donations and awareness for this sites financial needs.
I think new members in particular and those without any awards may be very interested in an easily achievable medal,to help them establish some level footing with the more heavily "decorated" of our knights.The knights who have won such awards are most surely deserving of them all and i do not wish any to feel slighted for others achieving such with minimal effort,perhaps the medal should only be given once a member has donated a set amount?
I know many will say that these are good reasons not to have medals and awards at all,but they help mark an individuals accomplishments and the efforts they put into the hobby.It's all a bit of fun at the end of the day!
And i for one cannot wait for the next RTOB awards ceremony.

ps.I will donate some more cash once i recuperate from my mothers,Mothers Day spending yesterday.sheesh! ;)

Well I squeezed and Squeezed until my archers eyes popped out... I thought that might be the ideal time to stop.

@Rafael: I disagree for several reasons. yes it does seem like buying a medal and i feel a medal should be earned not bought(even though it is a good cause).

A medal also seems unfair seeing as though there is a hall of fame.

Albin von Scorpio wrote:

The payment period for a year always starts at the beginning of December.

Regarding the medals, we had these discussions from time to time already, and the consensus has always been that it looks too much like buying a medal. I also think that it would probably spark too many "1$ / 1 EUR alibi" donations, just to obtain a medal. The compromise was to create the "Supporters" list and a status in the user profiles, to honour all your donations.

As a further incentive for a few more donations: Should we pass the yearly amount by a little more, I'll upgrade the server to newer and more powerful hardware (which by now costs just a little more). That will enable better and smoother operations even during peak times when more members are around.

Hmm...

Well, having only just turned 17 I'd always assumed I probably shouldn't be dabbling with online payments. I do however have more money than I can spend at the moment! I have no idea how paypal works though. I presume you can use debit card and that it's not creditcard specific. I shall have a look at how everything works and make a donation at some point before December.

After all, it's a great site! I haven't even been playing Warhammer for 2 years now, and I still couldn't bring myself to leave, even if I wanted to.

EDIT: How much in Â£'s are we short of that upgrade?

Yes, afaik you can use it with most common bank accounts, it only requires a credit or (US) debit card if you don't sign up.

Paypal always deducts some "paypal tax" on any transaction (from the receiver), so if anyone is uncomfortable with using Paypal I'm more than happy to share my EU bank account data via PM. Money transfers in the EU are completely free for both sides.

I agree a more in depth breakdown of the finances would be appreciated =)

The current level is 174 EUR of the required yearly amount of 192 in the current configuration, so not bad considering that there are still almost 2 months to go. Should that be passed I'll consider the upgrade which costs 5â,→ more each month (yearly total: 252 EUR), plus some significant amount of time on my side to move everything to a new physical machine.

Well, running a site fast costs money ;)

Server space and bandwidth is one thing, but that's not the limit at the moment and is fairly cheap (the whole Round Table is 2.3GB, and this months traffic was 33GB ). More importantly with such an interactive site is the response time, and that's something that needs to scale up as more and more users are visiting the site at the same time (I've seen 30 or more logged-in users plus a few guests at peak times). And for everyone browsing and using the site (commenting in the forum, looking at images in the gallery, reading articles, etc) the content has to be dynamically created by the server from data mainly stored in the database. For this CPU power and RAM is more important. We're currently on a virtual server with 20 or less sites running in parallel, whereas many cheap hosting providers host thousands of sites on one machine. Currently, we're guaranteed 512MB of RAM for the site. Renewing the account and moving to a new server will grant us 2GB, while an upgrade will grant us 3GB.

Professional sites easily spend our yearly amount each month or more, as you can't have your customers waiting or run away while your site is loading slowly.

Thanks for all the donations that kept the site running and ad-free for over 7 years! You may have noticed that the site could have been slow or unresponsive from time to time. This is because our current server configuration has reached its limit with increasing requests and users browsing the site, and I need to upgrade to a more powerful machine. This will increase the yearly rent of the server to 264 EUR per year, of which our current funds only cover 15%... please consider a donation!
